Sunset, in Canada, is my favorite place. We had a cabin, we went up the hill behind it to get to the sunset, and on a beautiful day, we used to go see the sunset. You can see the forest, with the sunset on it, and the horizon. My husband and I had beautiful memories there.

When I go to my sister's place in Success, there's the water. White for the white birches, and the autumn foliage that the lake reflects, and the water looks orange

Autumn and fall colors

Sky

The earth with a yellow sun

Old Orchard Beach, Maine

Dancing, I knit a lot, I crochet

You had a camp at Success Pond, in those years only camp owners could go. We'd drive up the dirt road, one or two miles, and there was a locked gate. I knew everyone there.

Trees, water, you'd go swimming, and could swim up to the trees

I was an electrical technician

Trees, when I was a little girl, the hill was all trees, and I was too scared to climb them

The place I used to go swimming was Peabody River in Gorham, it had very cold water from the mountains, it was the clearest water you ever saw

Flower hot house, I used to go to the greenhouse, and pick your own flowers, my friend Madeleine used to go to Bethel

New Smyrna Beach in Florida, we drove and had a picnic, and sat at the beach

We used to watch the rainbow over Acres Pond, we had a camp up there

A lake in Vermont where my camp was, it was a beautiful lake, not that far, fishing for fish, hunting for deer

Rye Beach in the summer, in New Hampshire, a rocky beach that is beautiful. I'm not a good swimmer, I think they have an amusement park and concerts in the summer.

My little shack by the Androscoggin River, with a teepee

The sunset

A rainbow

I'm a weird picture. A waterfall, at Crystal Mountain in Stark. There's a swimming hold there, you can go swimming and pack a picnic. Me and my mom went up, it was nice up there

An old pine you would climb underneath, no one could see you, and you'd hide away from everyone, where I grew up in Vermont
